Upland Deputy Fire Marshal Peter Bryan displays exhibit stressing October as the fire department's fire prevention month. Bryan said Upland organizations are being encouraged to call the department to arrange presentations during October. For further information, call city hall, 982-1352, and ask for the fire department during regular business hours, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. ### Department offers presentations

Fire prevention stressed

The Upland Fire Department has named October its fire prevention month and is encouraging organizations in the city to contact the department to arrange presentations.

Peter Bryan, Upland's deputy fire marshal, noted the department is concentrating this year on advice aimed at preventing residential fires.

He said home fires account for the greatest loss of life and dollar damage nationally.

and dollar damage nationally.

Through inspections and code requirements, fire officials can help ensure compliance with fire standards at businesses, Bryan noted.

However, he said firefighters have to rely on public education and citizens' awareness to help prevent residential fires.

residential fires.

He estimated that during 10 years Upland might typically expect 10 lives lost due to fires. A 50 percent drop in that figure is a good target to aim at, he added. By congressional proclamation, Oct. 7 to 13 is national fire prevention week. Bryan noted the week marks the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire, which started

Bryan said the department has both films and slides to show in its presentations, which will be made at schools as well as to Upland organizations.

Officials for groups in the city can make arrangements by calling the fire department, 982-1352, during regular city hall business hours, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Bryan noted the presentations may be made during club luncheons or evening meetings and could run into November if necessary to accommodate the requests.

He said the United States leads all nations in deaths the testing describe its technology, and added that Presidents.

He said the United States leads all nations in deaths due to fire, despite its technology, and added that President Jimmy-Carter has urged efforts to prevent life loss.

Bryan said if the statistics are comparable year to Figures show some 9,000 persons were killed in fires last year compared to 10,000 in 1977 and a previous annual rate of about 12,000.

He credited increased public awareness and use of smoke detectors as possible reasons for the drop.

However, the deputy fire marshal pointed out a number of potential fire hazards still go undetected.

As an example, he said, residents living in a two-story home should have a second exit planned in case a fire blocks their stairway.

Upland dispute

Police try to clear air in neighborhood meet

By DON GREEN Staff Writer

A much calmer mood prevailed last Wednesdasy night when police, city officials and about 20 residents of southeast Upland discussed an ongoing investigation into a weekend attack in the paighborhood.

weekend attack in the neighborhood.
Police said one suspect, a 28-yearold Ontario man, was arrested and booked on suspicion of armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the incident early Saturday morning.

A second suspect in the attack was arrested by Upland police Monday afternoon.

Fidel Ramirez Beltran, 20, 862 Alameda Ave., Ontario, was booked on charges of armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon. Bail was set at $10,000.

Upland detective Marty Thouvenall said Beltran was arrested at his place of employment in Ontario after officers obtained a warrant for his arrest.

Warrants for the arrest of others believed involved in the incident — which included an attack upon two Upland teen-agers and shots fired into one of the victims' car — were also issued.

Police outlined procedures in the investigation, results of a neighborhood canvass taken Wednesday and patrols in the area and fielded residents' questions.

And while a few of the residents left the meeting still grumbling over police handling of the incident, most seemed satisfied with the course of the investigation.

At least none expressed the strong criticism and angry statements that marked their presentation Monday night before the Upland City Council. Perhaps 15 residents attended that meeting, and their urgent request for action led to the session Wednesday.

Police Chief Coy Estes, Capt.
Gary Hart, Sgt. Doug Millmore and Detective Martin Thouvenell, the investigating officer, attended the meeting, as did City Manager Lee Travers and Frank Hoover, a member of the council's police and fire committee.

Estes started the discussion by saying he was "very aware" of the incident and the potentially

"explosive situation" before Monday's council meeting.

He said the investigation was begun Monday morning and "followed normal procedure," adding that police "couldn't move any faster" than they did.

"Things fell into place as they usually do," he commented.

Questioned on why police waited until Monday morning to begin investigation of the attack that occurred between 1:30 and 2 a.m. Saturday, Estes outlined the procedures.

Police responded to 200 calls during the weekend, and seven or eight of the cases were considered to be the most serious, he said. Estes included the attack in an alley in the 500 block of East Ninth Street among the serious cases.

He noted police received the first call reporting the incident at 2:06 a.m. and that the officer in charge finally left the area at 6:41 a.m.

Extra hours were spent preparing a 25-page report on the incident and that report had to be typed, Estes said. The time-consuming process led to the assignment of investigation Monday morning, he added.

"And that's the way any police agency works," he said.

Several residents, including the victim who owns the vehicle, wondered why the car was not dusted for fingerprints.

Estes said that "99 percent" of the time police cannot retrieve usable prints from a steering wheel and reiterated his support of officers' decision not to have car dusted.

After the meeting, Sgt. Millmore gave a detailed explanation to several residents on the limits of fingerprinting, saying its value to police investigation is probably overrated by the public.

The owner of the car, who was struck once and had a gun pointed at his midsection, noted the car received extensive damage when it was stolen and crashed into a nearby parked car. Five bullets were also fired into the victim's car.

He said he had put extensive work into the car, expressed concern over liability for damage to the parked car and added he still believes the car should have been dusted.

Responding to other questions, Estes said police cannot conduct lineups at the scene of a crime. A Supreme Court decision requires police to have four or five persons with characteristics similar to a suspect's for a valid lineup, he added.

The police chief said police lacked evidence for arrests Saturday morning, noting that if arrests were made the case could have been jeopardized and police might have been left open to charges of false arrest

Detective Thouvenell said some potential witnesses are still "reluctant to come forward," posing a problem for the investigation.

Estes repeated that tape records show police received no unanswered calls between 1:40 and 2 a.m. Saturday, despite one resident's report that several were made.

Capt. Hart said the canvass of the Ninth Street area showed most residents feel current police patrols are "more than adequate."

Volunteers trained

Want to do something about the plight of the aged in nursing homes?

An ombudsman volunteer program, run by the county office on aging, will offer a training program on Thursday, Oct. 18. Volunteers will be trained on the process of aging, the nature of long-term care facilities, government regulations, Medicare and Medi-Cal laws, as well as taking complaints from the elderly about their situation.

Interested volunteers should arrange for an interview with the Office on Aging, which can be reached at 383-3861.

"Little house"

Hopes of returning encouraged family in camp

By LINDA BERGSTEDT Panorama Editor

Hopes of returning to a "little house in Upland" brought encouragement to a Japanese-American family held in a relocation camp in Poston, Ariz., during the days of World War M.

The house had been home to Hichirouyemon Fukuda and his fourth daughter, Fumiko or "Micky," for five years while Fukuda was gardener for the A.B. Whitney family.

"You're speaking about the little house certainly means much to us as all we think about is the day when we return to Upland and civilization," wrote Fumiko in one of her 150 letters to the Whitneys and friends over an 18-month period. The house recently was donated to the Chaffey Communities Cultural Center, Upland and has been moved to the center to be used as a caretaker's home

Fukuda's life in the United States began in 1904 when he settled in California with his wife. Before 1913, he moved his family to Upland and worked as a gardener in the community and in citrus groves. His daughters were educated in local schools and life must have seemed good to the Fukudas. Then, in 1925, Fukuda's wife passed away, leaving him with seven daughters.

In February 1937, Fukuda, then 65, along with Fumiko moved into the little house at 805 W. 16th St. in Upland ... a house which Mrs. A.B. Whitney had especially built for them. Fukuda did gardening and odd jobs on the Whitney place. Fumiko, who had been designated to stay with her father in keeping with Japanese tradition, kept house for him. The other six daughters frequently visited.

At this time, Mr. Whitney was an invalid with serious heart trouble. The two Whitney sons, Bradford and George, were away at college and by the time of the war were serving as officers in the U.S. Navy.

George, who now resides in the family home with his

George, who now resides in the family home with his wife, Isabel, remembers Fukuda as very trustworthy and dependable.

"He was extremely dependable. We'd go off for the summer to stay at our house at the beach and leave him in charge of everything and we never worried," he recalled.

"Fukuda spoke very little English and he was a Buddhist," Whitney said. "He was extremely clean, took very good care of the gardens and was a very fine servant, very loyal."

Then came May 1942. Fukuda and his entire family, like so many other Japanese-Americans during the war, were taken to the Santa Anita interpment camp and from were taken to the Santa Anita internment camp and from there transferred to relocation camps or centers.

Fukuda and four of his daughters were sent by train to Poston in the hot and dry Arizona desert.

"It was a terrible shock when the orders were received," George Whitney said in a recent interview.

"The whole thing was a terribly sad affair. I feel it was a rather black mark on our country ... the uprooting and taking away to camps was a terrible thing."

The letters flew between that camp in the Arizona desert and Upland as Fumiko wrote more than once a week, describing the camp conditions, the awful food, the dust and despair. George and Isabel Whitney have those letters and reading them is like stepping back into the past.

In her first letter to Mrs. A.B. Whitney, Fumiko described the seven-hour train ride to Poston, a ride she said, "changed the people from jovial passengers to a bitter, resentful group. We're wondering how such a God-forsaken place could ever have been located and could human beings possibly exist in such an environment."

After being finger-printed, the Japanese-Americans signed loyalty documents and were taken by Army trucks to their barracks. The room Fumiko and her father and sisters shared was 20-by-25-feet with one large door and five large windows.

Fumiko and her sisters found the food quite bad but felt they could manage. However, Fumiko wrote, "It really is quite heart-breaking to find things not suited for Dad, but he certainly hasn't complained about the type of food we have had."

An example of the food they were given was rice and cold sauerkraut for breakfast.

But dirt and dust were the real enemies. In June 1942, Fumiko wrote about a dust storm that was so bad they kept towels over their noses because the room was filled with dust. The inside temperature was 106 degrees.

In another letter, Furniko wrote, "The barrack is hard to keep dust free as there are cracks about ¼-inch between each floor plank, but we get a good laugh in the fact that if we wash the floor off, the water need not be award out."

After seven months, the family was reunited in November 1942 when the other daughters joined Fumiko and her sisters in Poston.

Fumiko's letters continued full of longing for Upland and the "little house."

Then tragedy briefly brought Fumiko home. Mrs. A.B. Whitney was killed in an automobile accident on Feb. 10, 1943 and Fumiko was granted leave to come to Upland for a brief visit, accompanied by a Father Clements, a Catholic priest who had been very helpful to the Fukudas.

After Mrs. Whitney's death, the Upland family and their friends began an earnest effort to have Fumiko released and returned to Upland to relieve the nurse caring for the elderly Mr. Whitney, who required concentrated nursing care.

The appeal was made to Lt. General John DeWitt, commanding general of the Western Defense Command and Fourth Army. A copy of the letter is in the Whitney's scrapbooks along with Fumiko's letters. George and Isabel Whitney also have a newspaper clipping about Lt. General John DeWitt's vehement opposition to any plan of returning Japanese-Americans to the West Coast.

The letters from Fumike continued to the Whitney

The letters from Fumiko continued to the Whitney residence, some to Mr. Whitney, others to the nurse caring for him, a Mrs. Sanderson.

"There is nothing I should like better than going back to Upland and although things at the present time do not seem very favorable, I have not ceased to hope and pray," Fumiko wrote to Mrs. Sanderson on March 25,

In late April of that year, Furniko and her sister, Louise, had the opportunity to go to Chicago to a Catholic school as domestics. But they did not want to leave Poston until their father had been transferred to Oregon, where one of his other daughters had settled.

As they anticipated relocation, Fumiko wrote, "I do want you to know, Mr. Whitney, that regardless of where we may go or what we may do, all the pleasant memories of Upland will be the closest and dearest to our hearts."

Finally in May 1943, Fukuda was headed for Ontario, Ore., and Louise and Fumiko, after seeing their Dad

Ore., and Louise and Fumiko, after seeing their Dad settled in Oregon, were going to Chicago.

At this point, they gave hope of returning to Upland.

Fumiko wrote to Mr. Whitney, telling him to go ahead and rent the little house.

After the war, Fumiko married and settled in the Los Angeles area. All the Fukuda daughters kept in touch with the Whitney family through yearly notes on Christmas cards. Fukuda passed away and was buried in Bellevue Cemetery in Ontario beside his wife.

A few years ago, Fumiko passed away.

All that is left are memories and 150 letters from a relocation camp in the dry Arizona desert.

Chaffey teachers keep ACT

Teachers in the Chaffey Joint Union High School District have voted 2-to-1 to retain the Associated Chaffey Teachers as their exclusive bargaining agent.

The vote was 320 for ACT, 153 for the local unit of the American Federation of Teachers, and six for no representation.

"We are very pleased," said Maryellen Hill, ACT president. "Now we have to start on the business at hand, which is negotiating with the school board.

The decertification election was called by the West San Bernardino County Federation of Teachers, part of the AFT and the AFL-CIO. The ACT, an affiliate of the California Teachers Association and the National Education Association, became the exclusive bargaining agency for Chaffey teachers shortly after teachers were granted collective bargaining rights in 1976.

Thirty percent of the district's teachers had to sign a petition to implement the voting procedure.

Mrs. Hill said 70 percent of Chaffey's 680 teachers turned out for the election. "That was very encouraging, but we would have liked a 100 percent turnout.

ACT representatives are scheduled to meet with the district Monday to continue contract negotiations.

Before student fees were charged, driver training cost Huntington Beach $220,000 per year, Plum said. Last year, the total cost was $32,000.

Students who were unable to afford the fee were granted exemptions, including all youngsters covered by Aid to Dependent Families. Other students were allowed to work on campus at $3 per hour to earn the fee.

Despite rumors to the contrary, the district has not been sued for charging a fee, Plum said."We had five parental complaints. But out of 26,000 students, that's not too bad."

The CTA is investigating reports that automobiles provided by the driving school were unsafe, Foglia said. "We feel the autos offered are not the same kind of quality automobiles other districts are using.'

The CTA's legal department is also looking into the possiblity that school administrators in districts contracting with Safe-Way had a conflict of interest, Foglia said.

C. Robert Erickson, assistant superintendent for instruction at Chaffev, said he suggested contracting with Safe-Way because he knew the Fullerton and San Juan Capistrano high school districts had used the company's services.

Asked about the charge of conflict of interest, he said, "I didn't even let their representative buy me lunch.

However, he said, John Kaufman - who furnishes equipment to Safe-Way - "is the friend of a friend."

According to Chafin, the Jan. 1 effective date was chosen to give Omnitrans time to adjust fares again if necessary before it must be in compliance with provisions of SB620. The agency must be in compliance beginning July 1, 1980.

Stark said that while the timetable prepared for Claremont Sports Park is somewhat flexible, he is hoping for a firm decision on the velodrome site by the first of next year

Asked about Bradley's turn to Harbor College rather than Claremont as an alternative to the Sepulveda Basin, Stark said, "You have to realize it is a choice made by the mayor of Los Angeles.

'If I were mayor of Los Angeles, I would want to put the facilities in Los Angeles, too. That's the way politics work.

He called the "weakest" part of the college's proposal the fact that Claremont does not vote in the Los Angeles mayoralty election.

Stark's counterpart, Harbor College President, Edward Robings, was obviously pleased and surprised by Bradley's announcement, noting the mayor had not contacted him beforehand

He said the college has 21 undeveloped acres that could be used for the velodrome. Robings said cycling enthusiasts and community leaders, not the college, originated the proposal.

Unlike the San Fernardino Valley. residents near Harbor college have not expressed opposition to the plans, he said. Robings said no homes abut the property, which is near a regional park.

Members of the regional park board are "willing to see me do anything" with the "21 acres of weeds," he joked.

The college is located next to the Harbor Freeway and additional parking would not be needed since classes will be closed for the summer in 1984, he said.

As a community college, Harbor College has no on-campus dormitories, but Robings said nearby facilities might be used.

Robings added that an architect with experience in building velodromes has reviewed the site and found it suitable.

The site, along with the Sepulveda Basin, has already been selected for environmental review.

Robings said the only cost figures he has received so far are those used for the Sepulveda Basin site, which came to nearly $9 million.

The potential cost for a Claremont velodrome came to just over $11 million, but those figures include contingencies and hedges against in-

Claremont Men's College has letters of support from the U.S. and Southern California cycling associations, but Robings said it was "unfair" for either proposal to claim the sole support of cyclists.

TV applicants must compete for franchise

If Six Star Cablevision wants a franchise to set up subscription television in Chino, it will have to compete with other applicants.

The city council declined this week to grant an exclusive permit to the firm because it "would not be the best interest of the city."

City Manager John Gerardi said other firms also have indicated an interest in serving Chino and should be considered before the franchise is awarded.

State may provide funds for water treatment plant

By DAN NIEBRUGGE Staff Writer

Efforts through joint power agreements by the Pomona Valley and Chino Basin municipal water districts could result in funding from the state for the estimated $25 million Miramar Treatment Plant in north Claremont by the end of the Officials of the Pomona Valley district met recently in Sacramento and again in Pomona with representatives of the state Department of Water Resources which is presently allocating some $175 million in clean water funds to local water agencies.

The funds were authorized for release by the voters when they aploved Proposition 3 on the 1976 ballot. The funds have been designated for districts which require aid in improving water quality to meet guidelines set by the state Department of Health. The heath department is developing a priority list of water districts from which the Department of Water Resources will select the districts and agencies to be funded for improved water quality programs.

Dan Corrigan, a senior planner with the Department of Water Resources indicated the Pomona-Chino plan has a good chance of winning approval for funding because the one large Miramar plant would serve the entire valley and both municipal districts.

The trend is toward larger, more efficient plants," said Corrigan. Under the plan being developed for funding, the Chino district would form joint powers agreements with its five member agencies, each of which could then borrow as much as $1.5 million from the state to go toward the project.

Concurrently, the Pomona district could borrow, along with its nine member agencies, in the same potential amounts because those agencies have all been declared improvement districts under laws passed in 1975 when the district sought its first bond election to fund the Miramar project and an additional project in Tonner Canyon adiacent to Diamond Bar.

Both Chino Basin and Pomona Valley would form a joint powers agreement to operate the Miramar

Officials note that the new plant would supply the valley with water from the State Water Project which is of much higher quality - from the standpoint of the Department of Health - than the water now coming to much of the area from the Colorado River.

PVMWD General Manager Stan Kawa said he is optimistic about the plan and feels the state will grant the loans to the various districts because local nitrate levels are too high, Colorado River water is too salty and the present reliability of supply is not good because of the loss of entitlements to Colorado River water which the Southern California Metropolitan Water District will suffer when present agreements expire in the 1980s.

Fall in California a good planting time

At a time when gardeners across the nation are about to hibernate for the winter, the California gardener is entering one of his busiest seasons. For fall is like a second spring in the Golden State when just about anything or everything can be planted.

Fall planting is one key to quick growth. The soil is still warm from summer's baking, so newly planted shrubs, trees and perennials are quick to send out new roots. They become established before winter weather gives them deep soakings with its rains. They are, therefore, ready to develop at maximum speed when winter once again turns to spring.

The California Association of Nurserymen (CAN) suggests that almost everything in the nursery can be planted in fall. The possible exceptions are citrus and other evergreen fruits in northern California but in the southern part of the state, these are fine too!

Your top priority for planting in early fall are new lawns. These are best planted between September and late October. Fall-planted lawns are months ahead of spring planted lawns for the reasons outlined above.

Bedding plants can still be set out for winter and early spring bloom. Calendulas, pansies, violas, stocks, cineraria, snapdragons and fairy primroses are available bedding plants. Their season of bloom will depend entirely on the nature of our fall. If warm weather carries into November, they will bloom by Christmas.

Perennials of all kinds are best planted in the fall. Both the bedding varieties and those shrubbler specimens which come in gallon cans can be planted now. Check with your local nursery about the list of perennials he offers. Consider everything in the perennial line, for the field is full of surprises.

Fall is the ideal time to plant trees - both evergreen and deciduous varieties. Here again, the few weeks of fall will help trees to get well established and ready for the big spring push. This can mean added feet of growth in a single year from fall-planted trees.

Shrubs of every description may be planted now, too. Fuchsias are at the peak of their bloom, or should be, and may be planted for still a few more weeks of show before the shorter days and cooler nights slow them down. Hedge plants are better started in the fall than in the spring. Privet, boxwood, pittosporum, English laurel, natal plum - you name your favorite in the hedge line and now's the time to plant it.

And then there are the bulbs - all spring blooming favorites, which should be planted between now and the end of November. The so-called cape bulbs from South Africa should go in this month: freesias, ixias, sparaxis, baby glads. These are only dormant a short time and early planting is a must. The major bulbs of spring tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and the Dutch iris need planting soon after they show up in nurseries which is anytime from now on depending on where you live in California. Keep a close check with your local CAN member this month and next be sure you get your choice of these bulbs when he has plenty on hand. You won't be

You especially won't be sorry to use California's fall as the best planting time for anything and everything you've been thinking of planting all year round!

New paneling, new paint and new floor tile would all be installed, he said, and electrical and plumbing repairs would be completed before the crew of young workers one of two crews in the program - leaves the home.

In spite of the fact that it costs recipients nothing for the work, it's hard to find people who want the work done, according to Hernandez.

"It's hard to find applicants. We have to go door to door," he said. "Some feel it's a handout. It's not a handout. It's designed, really, for the senior citizen and disabled person, those who can't do the upkeep themselves, and the need is tremendous.

The program, he said, is for owner-occupied homes only and applicants must meet federal economically disadvantaged guidelines. Priority is given to senior citizens and disabled persons.

Although only open to residents in northeast Ontario and some scattered parts of Rancho Cucamonga, the program will serve the cities of Ontario, Upland and Rancho Cucamonga beginning Oct. 1.

Workers are paid between $3.20 and $3.75 an hour, based on the merit of their work. Hernandez said.

Hernandez said when the program started, about 14 months ago, it was proposed to renovate 25 homes.

Romero said that figure was exceeded long ago. "I've lost track of how many we've done.'

Hernandez said the program helps the CETA workers as much as the persons whose homes are worked on.

Many CETA programs use unskilled labor for menial work, he noted. "I don't think it's useful for the kids just to go out and pull weeds. Here, they're actually Romero said he enjoys sharing the skills he learned from 25 years in construction with his teen-age crew. Some, he said, have been able to find other jobs because of the experience.

He looked around him, at a room full of youths painting walls. "They tend to have pride in their work," he said. "They're very good workers. When they have a lot of work, they go right to it. You don't have to tell them what to do.

But support is lukewarm

Gann initiative backed by county supervisors

five county supervisors endorsed the allowable increase in Gann initiative Monday after learning that the government spending limitation proposal is not likely to cause damage to the county's current level of services.

recent rate of population increase and the recent requiring programs by local pattern of increases in the cost of living, the county will not fare too badly under the initiative if the proposal passes in November, the supervisors were told by county staffers.

There is some concern that the combined effect of Prop. 13 and the Gann initiative will have some impact on the county's growth rate however and possibly for that reason the five supervisors were at best only lukewarm in their endorsement.

"As with all initiatives, it's not all perfect," said Supervisors' Chairman James Mayfield, "but it will set in motion the pattern of some kind of limitations on the growth of government.

The staff report, prepared by executive analyst Fazle R. Quadri at the request of Mayfield, revealed that even if the initiative had been law over the last five years, the county's spending would have been within the limit.

Quadri's figures. however, were based on an average of totals over the past five years. For the first three of those years, from 1975 to 1978, county spending actually exceeded the proposed Gann limits.

It was only after the passage of Prop. 13, the Jarvis property tax initiative in 1978, that county spending dipped below the allowable Gann limits.

The Gann measure, Prop. 4 on the November ballot, is leading in most polls.

As proposed by Paul Gann, the one-time associate of Jarvis in Prop. 13 days, the initiative would limit spending increases of all government in the state to spending increases no larger than the annual population increase, expressed in percentage, combined with the annual cost of living increase.

Thus, if San Bernardino County's population increased by the rate of

Practice makes perfect on area's parallel bars

Story by

Steve Standerfer

According to two area instructors. a few years ago girls gymnastics experienced a tremendous surge after the Olympic performance of Cathy Rigby and some popular Soviet athletes. And now, with men's stars such as Photos by Kurt Thomas and Bart Connors, boys are also getting more into the sport with some having dreams of someday going to the Olympics. Area gymnastics teachers say Tom Tondee that even though the chances of youths making an Olympic gym-

With the help of television and nastics team are very slim, gymsome famed performers in national nastics is still a fun, individual sport and Olympic competition, gymthat can develop coordination and nastics is experiencing increased self-confidence. To learn about the sport there is various reading material available, but, as with anything, the best way to learn is by doing.

In the West End there are a few private gymnastics clubs, the West End YMCA and recreation departments in Upland, Chino and Rancho Cucamonga that have programs.

"I think we're kind of unique in that most of the clubs around don't have an all boy's program," said Bill Rawlings, head instructor for Upland Recreation Department's program.

Rawlings explains that gymnastics used to be a sport dominated by men, but women recently have come to excel in the sport.

Hollie Brown, of Somis Gymnastics in Rancho Cucamonga, said it is easier to teach girls since they have only four gymnastic events compared to six for men, and less equipment is required.

In the past, "little boys couldn't identify with gymnastics because it wasn't exposed on TV," Rawlings said. But now with more exposure there's been an increased interest. Also, Brown said that some may have seen gymnastics as a feminine

"I think people would look at men gymnasts as kind of feminine or not very strong...and yet if they really stopped and took a look at them they would be shocked at how strong they are and how difficult it is to do what they do." Brown said. And what about boys who are

"urged" into the sport by parents. "We recognize that not all of the little boys are here because they want to be so we try to make it fun,"

Rawlings said. He said many parents are shying away from team sports, where children could be more prone to injury, and going for individual sports such as gymnastics. "I think that as a recreation department we have an obligation to the kids to provide them with a good service, to teach them the best that we can teach them. "They may never be good gymnasts or stay in the sport but at least they've had the exposure and the chance to get involved in it," said Rawlings.

Gymnastics is a rapidly changing sport - both in equipment and in requirements in competition. It is so rapidly changing that Brown wonders where it's all going to end.

"If you could look back and see what Cathy Rigby was doing when she won her balance beam routine, those elements that she was doing are done now just at the class two (intermediate) level," Brown said.

The United States Gymnastics Federation (USGF) will be toughening its scoring system so that this Gymnastics country's competitors will stand up better in international judging which is often politically slanted, Brown said.

Along with the rules changes have come advances in equipment followed by more daring and difficult

As routines are advanced, it raises standards for the various classes of competitors which can make things frustrating, Brown

She explained that although a girl may qualify one year at the in-termediate level, the following year she could have to do more difficult routines to qualify for the same classification.

Scoring is now done on a 10 point system based on difficulty and ability in each event.

Girl's events are the floor exercise, vault, uneven bars and balance beam. Boy's events include the floor exercise and vault along with rings, high bar, even parallel bars and the pommel horse. Those in USGF competition in this area are in zone six of Southern California. The top 14 competitors in preliminary competitions within each zone then move to district competition with all Southern California

The top 14 out of that contest then go on to state meets.

Regional and nat petitions are then held for those in the advanced or elite classes.

Brown said it is beneficial for a gymnast taking lessons outside of school to also compete scholastically. The gymnast with outside training will generally have an edge over teammates who only train through school, she said.

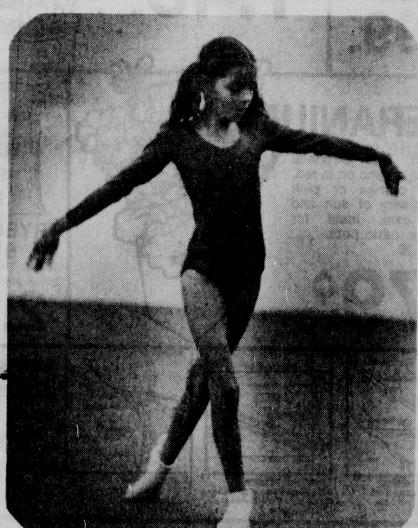

Brown feels that gymnasts in school will also get better exposure putting them in line for scholarships.

The costs for outside lessons vary according to class size and the length of class sessions.

Classes are available for all ages starting at three years on up. Not all gymnastics clubs or recreation departments have programs for both girls and boys though.

Things take on a different view when you're doing a hand stand like Anette Stump. The 13-year-old Ontario girl competes in the in-termediate class for Somis Gymnastics.

Dawn Bednar, 11, of Ontario, practices her floor exercise, one of four events girls must compete in. The others include the vault, uneven bars and balance beam.

Tots work out on a balance beam during class. Here, Roxanne Wilhoit, 4, of Upland, leads the way. Children as young as 3 may get involved in gymnastics classes in the West End.

Some words of wisdom were given to a group of educators gathered to hear Assemblyman John Vasconcellos at Chaffey College last week.

Vasconcellos, representing Santa Clara County for 13 years, was in Southern California for a quick 28-stop speaking tour and to "get out and see what's going on." # VISA. Our way.

You can't beat VISA for convenient credit and charge privileges around the world. We're not even going to try. We have something else in mind – a revolutionary new way to pay your Visa bill. It could save you a lot of money.

Until today you had only two ways to pay a Visa bill. One, pay the entire amount when due, avoiding any interest charges. Two, pay in installments with traditional bank interest charges of up to 18% a year. Now there's another option if you qualify for a Visa card with our name on it:

The 1% Advantage.

It's an exclusive, honest-to-goodness benefit to savers.

Now you can turn any savings account we offer - Passbook, Certificate, T-Bill Plus, or 4-Year Treasury - into a substitute line of credit to pay your Visa bill. The cost to use this line of credit is just 1% more than your savings account earns. Otherwise, there are no charges.

You can use your savings account to cut your cost of credit while your savings account continues to earn interest and grow with insured safety. It's just that easy. And, it is an option. You don't have to use the 1% advantage. But it's there when you need it.

You can "use" up to 80% of your savings this way. You can set your own repayment schedule. Our only requirements are that you only use this service to pay amounts over $100, that you maintain at least $500 in savings pledged as a line of credit and that you pay the interest charges at least quarterly.

We have a similar arrangement with the American Express Gold Card. The terms are slightly different.

If you'd like to build some saving into your spending come talk to us about "The 1% Advantage." About VISA. Our way.

Our Visa card is not a debit card. United California Bank issues the card and processes all your transactions and billings. Your card has all the traditional features of a UCB Visa card, including check cashing privileges at any UCB office and emergency cash advances at any bank or S&L displaying the Visa symbol

All payments, when received are credited first to the unpaid FINANCE CHARGES accumulated through the date of receipt, and any balance of the payment in excess of the accumulated FINANCE CHARGE is credited to the outstanding loan balance. debited to the outstanding loan account. The amount of the FINANCE CHARGE, each day, is determined by multiplying the periodic daily rate times the outstanding loan balance on the previous day, and the amount thus determined is added to the unpaid balance of accumulated FINANCE CHARGES. The periodic rate used to determine the amount of the FINANCE CHARGE imposed each day is 1/365 of the applicable ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE. The applicable ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE is 1% plus the interest rate of the savings account pleaged to obtain the VISA Card loan privileges.

Annual interest rates on savings accounts currently range from 5.50% to 8%. Thus, the daily periodic rates will range from .0178082% to .0246575% with corresponding ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATES of 6.50% to 9%.

The applicable ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATES are subject to increase or decrease by the same amount as the annual rate of interest for the pledged savings account is increased or decreased. Moreover, the association may increase or decrease the ANNUAL PER-CENTAGE RATE by increasing or decreasing the percentage rate charged in excess of the interest rate of the pledged savings account after prior notice to the borrower

In no event can the ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE be less than 1% above the rate of return payable on the pledged account

Unified School District, view it merely as sloppy Computer field brisk despite business slump

Copley News Service Despite all the signs of economic ennui, the computer business remains fairly robust - suggesting that maybe, just maybe, the message has finally hit home in this country: We must improve productivity.

Yes, the computer industry continues to do relatively well, thank you, while other industries (particularly those related to the consumer) seem to range from listless to lachrymose.

To be sure, there are some problems in the computer industry. But overall, today's statistics look good - and so do tomorrow's prospects.

As interviews reveal, the current data-processing buoyancy seems to be a function of the re-awakening of supply side economics. Even though the recession should bring down interest rates and inflation, companies are going ahead with capital spending projects - such as installing a new computer system - which will improve productivity and corporate efficiency.

Last year, according to DATAMATION magazine, the top 50 data-processing companies enjoyed a handsome 22 percent sales increase to $37.6 billion up from a gain of 18.1 percent in 1977. After surveying almost 6,000 users of large computers in the United States, DATAMATION concluded, 'The outlook for mainframe manufacturers should be bullish over the

Exploitation of Bogart upsets Lauren Bacall

By NANCY ANDERSON Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD - Lauren Bacall is "so damned sick of the use of Bogie" by exploiters.

And she makes no bones about it. She was on the phone to talk about a segment of "The Rockford Files" in which she guests (to air Oct. 12), but when she was asked what she thinks about the new "The Man With Bogart's Face," she shifted willingly to the subject of her late husband's image and ts present uses. don't really know about that (the movie)," she said, but I'm just so damned sick of the use of Bogie, you know. It's been so overdone.

"There are ways to do it, as Woody Allen did it, which was imaginative. He's brilliant, and I admire him.

"But there are so many cheap people, and there is so much that is tasteless. They just want to hang something an't speak about that specific film ('Bogart's Face'), but generally speaking I'm against that stuff."

Bacall can understand, though, why Bogart's style has remembered, imitated and satirized, for, "He left such an enormous mark and such an indelible imprint on the motion picture world and on every generation of Americans that he will always be - I suppose impersonated in some way.

"There'll always be takeoffs, because he was so closely identified with playing the screen detective. He really invented it, so imitations can't be avoided.

"But I've not spent my time watching for these things, because I really have to get on with my life. Bogart's giant shadow hasn't darkened the path of his daughter, Leslie, but his son, Steve, "has had a difficult time growing up being Bogie's son.'

However, Bacall continued, her son by second husband, Jason Robards, "is totally uninhibited by both of us. Or either of us. 'It's not his nature.

"He respects and admires and is crazy about us both. To try to be the kind of actor his father is would be a neat trick, but Sam's head doesn't work that way. He does his own thing.

'He's very lucky, because he can enjoy both of us and still feel like a total individual.

Aside from an appearance in a half-hour segment of "Dr. Kildare" years ago, Bacall had never done series television prior to "Rockford.

She joined Jim Garner in an episode of his detective show, she said because, while they were working in a movie, "Health," he asked her to and because she likes the "Rockford" quality.

"Its standards are certainly higher than those of any other series I've seen," she said.

So, when they sent me a script which I liked, and they offered me a lot of money, I did the show.

Despite her successes, Bacall is never certain that they will continue or that she'll even get a job.

"I'm never calm," she declared. "Before I finish a project, I begin to say, 'Where's my agent?'

'I don't wait until the last day
